Organization Statement

Coddington Road Community Center has been a fixture of Ithaca's South Hill Community since 1949. Originally a one-room school house, the center's first childcare programs were opened in 1984. Since that time the center has grown to include a summer camp and an after school program. Situated on 12 partially wooded acres, the charming and welcoming childcare building is enhanced by the beauty of its surroundings. The children at Coddington enjoy the benefits of both a caring and structured classroom and a connection to the natural environment around them.

Coddington Road Community Center is a nonprofit organization dedicated to supporting families by providing children and youth with exceptional care in a warm, accepting, and safe environment. We are committed to providing enriching educational experiences in which children learn to carry out responsibilities, make decisions, express themselves creatively, and discover friendships. In partnership with Coddington staff, families and members of the community, we strive to help children realize their authentic selves.
